

Contemporary Islamic philosophy, which is not in the direction of influence of Muslim thinkers upon the historical formation of scholasticism in the middle Ages, has had more improvements that rarely known by Western thinkers. These active philosophical thoughts that can be encountered some of contemporary problems in modern Western philosophy bring some new approach to philosophical views. By comparing them we may have new perspectives from different approach of Islamic philosophy to contemporary philosophical views. This book is combination of some papers that the author has written in this field. The main focus is on Mulla Sadra's thoughts and new Sadraean philosophy. I have compare Western and Islamic philosophy in this book on some subjects like: the characteristics of this comparison, existence, causality, necessity, problem of evil, arguments for the existence of God, Divine activities and history of atheism.

Comparative Philosophy: Islamic, Western

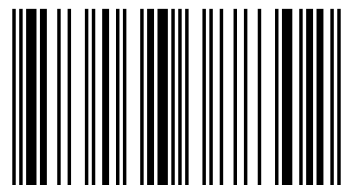

Hamidreza Ayatollahy

Comparative Philosophy: Islamic and Western

Hamidreza Ayatollahy is Emeritus Professor of Philosophy Department, Allameh Tabataba'ii University and Head of Iranian Association for Philosophy of Religion. His PhD is in Philosophy from Vrij Universiteit Brussel; and MA in Philosophy and BS in Physics. His works are 13 books, 58 papers in journals, 72 in conferences and 29 research projects

978-613-8-38830-2

Ayatollahy

